RFID theft on the rise

Brussels, Jan 1:

There has been seen a next to you in a public rise to complaints to transport, sitting on the banks by consumers on nearby table in the expenditure shown on café or even innocently their card that has not walking past you in the street. This is most been made by them. alarming.

On investigation it was found that a new breed of thieves are rampantly operating in our society that steal sensitive information's chipped into our cards without us even knowing about it. The best way not to fall for such con is to use RFID blocking wallets and keep all your credit cards etc in this. These wallets do not allow the scanner to read information clandestinely and has become a must safety for modern living. More and more smart people are using this device and it is becoming almost an essential.

These new smart operations are unsuspectingly able to gain access to information embedded in our credit/debit cards, ID, some RFID enabled passports, simply by a mere smush of their hands (having the scanner hidden) over our bags and wallets. This guy is able to do this even just while standing
